The "feculence" of Tilden enables him to gobble a good many delegations.

The Congressional Record is becoming more interesting than ever. The members are filling it with poems.

If Tilden's conduct is what his Democratic enemies call "sickiness," they will soon begin to wish they had the same disease.

It took $25,000 to make Voorhees "sick and disgusted" with the negro exodus to Indiana. It is worth all it cost to the Republicans as a campaign document.

In hopes to start a little for himself, Senator David Davis voted with the Democrats in favor of the "political rider." Davis is taking his pointers to a poor market.

The Democrats in Chicago are doing their old custom long enough on Cass to take another back-swing. The Democrats can't be content unless they are riddering or backing down.

The Chicago Times is bound to do justice to all the Presidential candidates. It has supported Davis, Grant, Washburne, and now it comes out for Blaine. The Times is just—it wants to make all things even.

The exports from the Hamilton (Canada) district to the United States for the month of March, 1880, was $95,000 against only $47,000 for the corresponding month in 1879. The total values of exports from the Hamilton district for the first three months of 1880, were $305,000, and for the corresponding three months last year, only $275,000, an increase of $30,000.
These facts have been furnished us by Mr. Frank Leland, the present United States Consul at Hamilton. The great increase is attributable to the advance in prices and to better times.

The most remarkable city in the world is no doubt Leadville, in Colorado. Its growth has been marvelous in the extreme.
It is only two years old, but it contains a population of forty thousand people. It has gas works and water works, churches, school houses, elegant hotels, fine brick business blocks, and handsome residences.
There are four large daily newspapers published there, and three of them are more pretentious in size and make-up

THE JANESVILLE GAZETTE.

VOLUME 24 JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1880. NUMBER 41 than any dailies published in Wisconsin.

The city is still growing, but whether its days of glory are only now, and that it soon will begin to decline, can hardly be conjectured. At the present time it is certainly the most wonderful city of the age, and in fact the world has not seen anything to surpass it. The cause of this mighty growth in the yield of fifteen millions of silver bullion in a year. So long as that yield continues, Leadville will prosper, when it ceases, the city will go into decay.

Professor H. A. Ward, the scientist, now in Africa, writes from Tunis, April 2, to Mr. J. S. Bliss, of Janesville, and says among other things—"I have just returned safely from a long trip down the coast of Barbary, as far as the city of Tripoli. I have with me lots of specimens of all kinds which I will show you when you next go to Rochester. Am well, but tanned the color of a piece of sole leather." This letter came from Barbary, on the Atlantic coast of Africa, to Janesville, in nineteen days, which speaks well of the mail facilities between this country and the far off East. Professor Ward is no doubt the most zealous workers for science and education, in the United States, and his great scientific establishment of twelve buildings at Rochester, New York, are an evidence of remarkable enterprise and thrift. He has probably supplied two hundred colleges and universities in America and Europe with his systematic collections.
When traveling in South America, he sleeps in his hammock suspended between forest trees to avoid being swallowed by the anacondas.

The discussion regarding the building of the Monroe extension to Dubuque, has again been revived, and it is said that there are some hopes that the road will be built.
Mr. J. H. Earrest, who has always taken a deep interest in the road, has visited Milwaukee for the purpose of conducting negotiations with the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul company. It is said that Mr.
Mitchell has promised that if the right of way and $2,000 per mile were raised, and the engineering difficulties were not greater than had been represented, the company would proceed to build the road from Monroe to Shullsburg, a distance of thirty-three miles. It seems the efforts of Mr. Earrest and others to meet the demands of the railway company have been successful. The right of way and $60,000 beside have been secured, and from this it would seem that all doubts regarding the building of the extension have been removed. It will probably be built to Shullsburg, the present season, and to Dubuque next year. This road will prove almost a priceless boon to the farmers and business men in the Southern part of Lafayette and Grant counties.

There was a remarkably interesting and affecting scene occurred in Philadelphia on Saturday, the 17th of this month.
It will be remembered that the friends of Francis Murphy in that city, recently gave him a handsome residence already furnished and ready for occupancy. On the day mentioned Mr. Murphy took possession of the new house and for the first time in ten years gathered his children together under one roof. Mrs. Murphy died while her husband was in prison for the crime of manslaughter, and a year after her death he determined to give up his life of dissipation, and after his release from prison he began to preach temperance in his feeble way, and soon accomplished much good. He was then too poor to take care of the children, and he placed the girls in an orphan asylum, and the boys on farms, and went out into the world to preach the gospel of sobriety. When he had saved forty dollars he took the daughters from the asylum and placed them in good homes where he paid their board.
Since Mr. Murphy began to speak upon temperance, he has addressed hundreds of thousands of people, and has been instrumental in reforming many thousands who had given up to drink. He soon became an orator of unusual power and influence, and to lay he stands in the front rank of men who are doing the most good for that class which needs reformation. Appreciating the great services he had rendered the temperance cause, his friends in Philadelphia, gave him the house, and for the first time since the mother died, he gathered his six children under one roof.

THE ASSASSINATION.

The De Young-Kallock trouble has finally resulted in the sudden death of Charles De Young, the senior editor and proprietor of the San Francisco Chronicle. The tragedy occurred at half past seven o'clock last evening. The particulars regarding the unfortunate affair will be found in our telegraphic columns. That this murder should have taken place is not out of the general order of things. It will be remembered that on the 23d of last August, De Young attempted to assault Rev. I. S. Kallock, the workman-co. candidate for Mayor of San Francisco. He sent a bullet through his body, which came near resulting in the death of his victim. He recovered however, and was elected Mayor. A criminal suit was commenced against De Young, and after being released on bail, he took an extensive trip through Kansas and the East in search of testimony relative to the life and character of Kallock.
On his return to San Francisco, I. M. Kallock, son of the Mayor, concluded to make way with De Young, and successfully carried out his purpose.
Charles De Young has had a remarkable career. He was in the main, responsible for the Kearney organization. He was bold, bitter, and unrelenting in his purposes, and defied his enemies with a courage that seems almost superhuman.

From nothing he built up a powerful newspaper in a few years, and was regarded one of the most successful editors and publishers in the United States. He was in the prime of life, and with common discretion and a more wholesome purpose, could have achieved an honorable name as well as immense riches. He virtually gave his life away—sacrificing it to wild ambition.

MR. TILDEN'S CANDIDACY.

There can be no doubt in the minds of Mr. Tilden's party enemies, that he is still in the field, and that he will contend for the nomination at Cincinnati. It appearances indicated several months ago that he would withdraw, or would not make any effort for the nomination, these appearances have vanished by this time. His health, which has given his Democratic enemies so much concern, is good, and his ambition is as great as it was in 1876.
The fact is, and it is as plain as the noon-day sun to any ordinary observer, that Mr. Tilden will go to Cincinnati with a large delegation in his favor, and that all the ability he possesses as a political schemer and manager, and the influence of his great wealth, will be brought forward to secure him the nomination. He is in earnest about this matter. To him it is a question of mighty concern. There is no man in the United States who has so much at stake as Samuel J. Tilden. As was said the other day by the Gazette, the party must give him the nomination at Cincinnati, or else it will be an open confession that the party has lost all confidence in him, and a failure to receive the nomination, will carry the name of Mr. Tilden down to history as the greatest political fraud of the age. Just in this light does the sage of Granary look at the question. He can view it in no other light, and hence his determination to defend his name, and if it needs to be fought for the nomination single-handed and alone. He has great courage, unlimited check, and boundless selfishness; and as he is a desperate one, he proposes to bring into play all his powers as a leader, and will use his vast fortune without stint to place his name at the head of the Democratic national ticket.

The Republican party may therefore expect to meet Mr. Tilden on the Presidential battle field. The opposition to him in the Convention will soon melt away before the seductive power of his barrel.
The South has sworn not to support him, and repeated warnings have come up from that section of the country, that if his nomination is forced upon the Convention he will lose some of the Southern States.
These warnings and threatnings should not lead the Republicans any encouragement whatever. The weakest candidate the Democrats can find in their party will, to all intents and purposes, carry the Solid South. They have the returning boards in their own hands, and will not hesitate to commit fraud however deep and damning, to carry their candidate through. The party must expect to give Mr. Tilden the South. With all his political sagacity he will make a clean sweep of the States which now threaten to politically assassinate him. For this reason the duty of the Republican party is to demand of the Chicago Convention the strongest, the ablest, and the best man for a candidate.
If it shall do this, he will carry every Northern State and win the election.

The Republicans must also understand that Mr. Tilden is one of the sharpest political managers in the country. The experiences of 1876-7 prove that no scheme is too bold and dark for him, if there is any hope that it will win. He would not hesitate a moment to purchase the Presidential chair with money if the opportunity to do that deed presented itself. The price would not stand in the way,—the only question to contend with would be—"Can any electors be bought?" With the fraud, trickery, and bribery of this man Tilden, the Republicans must contend.

Frederick Douglass and F's Wife.
From the Troy Times.

I was surprised to find that Frederick Douglass was hardly regarded as a representative man among them. His sympathies are to a certain ineradicable extent with the proud white blood of his race.
He is a true man but constitutionally unlike his mother's race. His wife, however, is a full-blooded negro, and I am told that she has never learned to read or write. He engaged himself to her when in bondage, she being a free negress of the same neighborhood, and after his escape to a settlement he led her back to marry her. He seems greatly attached to her.

It is always interesting to meet and to talk with Mr. Douglass. His grand head is now thickly covered with snow white hair and the years begin to tell upon him in other ways. But he is a majestic looking figure in a gray suit. I saw him at White House on New Year's Day.

A colored man pleaded his own case with marked success in Dallas, Texas, a week ago. He was accused of a crime as grave as murder, and had been convicted.
The judge denied the motion or a new trial, and asked the customary question, "Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced?" The prisoner responded that he knew nothing he could say would influence the court, as all his cases of law had been observed, but he would like to say a few words to his colored friends. He started off slowly and deliberately, reviewing the testimony, showing the inconsistencies of witnesses' and then carried away with the idea of the wrong done him, he burst forth in a strain of eloquence seldom heard. When he sat down the judge said: "Sara, I thought you guilty; I don't believe so now, and will set aside the judgment over-ruling your motion for a new trial and give you another chance." The county attorney dismissed the case and the prisoner walked out of the court room a free man. He was a "common head and", the local paper says, and uneducated."

VENGEANCE.

Charles De Young Murdered by Isaac M. Kallock, Son of the Mayor.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23—The feud between the De Youngs and the Kallocks which so nearly resulted in the death of one of the adversaries on the 23d of last August,—of Kallock senior by two bullets fired by Charles De Young, and of De Young himself at the hands of an infuriated mob of the adherents of the wounded man,—this evening culminated in a real tragedy, Charles De Young being shot and killed in the Chronicle office by I. M.
Kallock, son of the Mayor of San Francisco. The shooting took place at half past 7 o'clock to-night, De Young being almost instantly killed.

It was just seven months ago to-day that the bitter campaign in San Francisco culminated in an attempted murder, a tragedy which was the sensation of the hour in San Francisco and created excitement and intense interest all over the country.
As the present affair was so intimately connected with the shooting of last summer, a brief recapitulation will be of service to refresh the memory and assist in a proper understanding of the merits of the case.

The political campaign in the summer of 1879 was conducted with unusual virulence.
The workman-co. candidate was the Rev.
I. S. Kallock, who had a somewhat motley and checkered career in Boston and Kansas. Heading the opposition was Charles De Young, in a speech at the State Convention of "Honorable Bulks," announced that he would compel Kallock to withdraw from the contest. Subsequently he notified Kallock that unless he withdrew he would take up his unsavory record in the columns of the Chronicle. Kallock sent back word defying him, and stating that he could tell worse things about him than the De Youngs than they could about him.

Accordingly the De Youngs took up the gauntlet, and in the issue of Wednesday, August 30, the Chronicle opened fire with an article reviewing Kallock's career in Boston and Kansas. This article charged him with having been engaged in numerous amours and scandalous scrapes since he was 12 years old. He was charged with drinking while in the pulpit, and was connected with innumerable swindles and scandals, both in the East and in Kansas, whither he afterwards removed. The article created great excitement, and was followed the two succeeding days by still more virulent and personal attacks.

Friday night, August 22, Kallock had advised a mass meeting at the Metropolitan Temple, to which it was given out that he would read an article published five years previous in an obscure paper called the Sun, written by one B. F. Napthally. This article was a personal attack on the De Youngs, and the reputation of their mother, which had provoked a rain attempts to kill Kallock by the De Youngs.
At this time De Young sent word to Kallock that, if he read the article, he would be shot on sight. The meeting came off advertised, except that Kallock did not read the article, but contented himself with a merciless attack on the family record of the De Youngs. He said that he had the article in his pocket, and that it would be published and commented on within a few days.

De Young evidently considered the proceedings of the evening as equal provocation to the reading of the article, and acted accordingly. The following day, which was Saturday, the 23d, Charles De Young drove in a coupe to the side entrance of Metropolitan Temple, and sent a messenger to tell Kallock that someone wished to see him. As Kallock came toward the coupe De Young fired twice, and Kallock fell, shot in the breast and in the thigh. A crowd immediately assembled, and De Young was seized. He was kicked and bruised, and would undoubtedly have been stamped to death on the spot had not a large body of police come suddenly to the rescue and hurried him to jail.

The result was, of course, intense excitement on the part of the workingmen, and the calling out of the police and military.
The mob was preparing to sack the Chronicle office and lynch the De Youngs, when it was pacified by the announcement that Kallock was improving and in no immediate danger.

At that time Kallock's son was prominent as one of the leaders of the mob. He made an incendiary speech at the Sand-lots, where he was received with tumultuous cheers. He assailed De Young in terms no less outspoken than those used by his father, and appealed to the crowd, in case De Young should not be legally executed, to kill De Young and help the speaker to avenge his father. The mob was finally appeased by Kearney and awed by the galling guns and military preparations.

As Kallock grew better the excitement subsided, and when Kallock was elected and De Young released, the whole affair had almost been forgotten.

Charles De Young, the murdered man, was a notable character on the Pacific Coast. He was about 40 years of age and of Jewish extraction. Less than twenty years ago he was setting type on the Sacramento Union. With but little capital other than his hands and brain, he left for San Francisco, where, in company with his brother Mike, he started a theatrical advertising agency known as the Dramatic Chronicle. Despite its small size it made itself felt from its stirring personalities and bright, witty articles. Its editors secured the services of good writers, Mark Twain among the number, and from the outset it was an assured success. Through its growth from a small sheet to a large and successful newspaper, the scent of the roses has clung to it still, and Charles De Young has made the Chronicle noted for its personalities and sensations. Many a man has gone gunning for Charles De Young, but has always found him a man who would shoot on the slightest provocation. He has had numerous shooting affairs, but generally he "chased the drop" on his man and came out unharmed. He was noted for his pique, energy, shrewdness, and sagacity from the days when he worked at the case until he had made the Chronicle the successful paper of to-day.

Exciting Scenes in the Republican State Convention.

GEORGIA.

Exciting Scenes in the Republican
State Convention.

ATLANTA, April 23—The Republican Convention passed resolutions denouncing the outrage on Callet Whitaker, and declaring it the duty of the administration to protect colored cadets better, and in them the President was asked to appoint part of the cadets-at-large from the colored race.

Over the choice of the delegation to Chicago there is great excitement. The committee reported for a second time still giving an anti-grant delegation, with fourteen negroes.
The Grant men furiously declared the committee had arbitrarily disregarded all the district conventions, and chosen who it pleased. But replies were made, and the convention was in a storm all the morning. The Grant men carried a resolution declaring that the report be revised in the convention. Several Grant delegates were thus secured, and the delegation was uninstructed. Resolutions that it vote as a unit and for Blaine were defeated. The colored leaders kept the reins they had seized yesterday, and controlled the proceedings all day.
Twenty-four negroes were put on the State Central Committee, and a negro was made Chairman, over a white man. This created great enthusiasm among the colored delegates. The committee were empowered to choose an electoral ticket, an call conventions to nominate Congressmen. It was not determined whether a State ticket would be put out.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Result of Gladstone's Private Conference with the Queen at Windsor.

LONDON, April 23—The result of Mr.
Gladstone's private conference with the Queen at Windsor is understood to be entirely satisfactory. The Liberal leader left Windsor by the 8:15 train. The entire route to the station was lined with people who cheered vociferously. The immense crowd rushed with wild enthusiasm to the station and there formed on either side of Mr. Gladstone's carriage, from the window of which the great orator addressed them and thanked them for the reception. The people of Windsor state that the ovation is the greatest ever remembered. Rumors respecting the issue of the visit have it that Mr. Gladstone has consented to form a cabinet, the names of which he will submit Monday or Tuesday.

DIED IN PRISON.

MILWAUKEE, April 23—Charles G.
Bosse, whose pardon from the Governor reached him last night, died this evening at the House of Correction, having been too ill to be removed to his home. Bosse was for many years bookkeeper of Mitchell's Bank. He pleaded guilty to defalcation, and was sentenced to three years, of which he had served about six months.

MELANOSIS.

A White Boy Turning into a Negro-The Peculiar Case Described.

A Philadelphia dispatch says: For over sixteen months an uptown physician has been attending a case of disease that is so rare that the like of it has never been, or at least, recorded in medical works. It is a case of real Melanosis, or pigmentation, where the pigment, or melanin, as it is technically called, which gives color to the hair and eyes, pervading the whole body.
A boy born of white parents, and perfectly natural in color at his birth, turned under the disease as black as a full-blooded negro. The parents live at No. 1,307 Lemon street, the father, John Satter, being a mechanic. For months the boy's marriage was born to the couple a fine and apparently healthy boy. The infant thrived, and promised to develop into a robust man. He was a beautiful child, with fair complexion, dark eyes, and silky, dark brown hair, which grew in profusion. But in a hair, which grew in profusion. But in a few days the parents were alarmed at a remarkable change that was coming over the child. He gradually grew dark. At first his skin became a pale yellow, then deepened into a saffron hue, and then, to the terror of the parents, grew darker yet. The color was uniform all over the body, except at the joints, where it was a little darker, and in the palm of the hands where it was lighter.
The once brown hair grew stiff and jet black, and the eyes also grew darker, so that the line between the pupils and the iris could not be distinguished. In spite of medical treatment the boy's condition grew very weak. At last he became as black as a full-blooded negro. Then he was attacked by convulsions, which grew more frequent and violent until they threatened the child's life. It was in one of these that Dr. Reynolds was called in. He succeeded in curing the convulsions, and then devoted his attention to the strange disease which afflicted the child. He at once recognized it as melanosis or pigmentation, which is mentioned in the books in a general way, but there is no case given where it has developed all through the body. This was over sixteen months ago, the child being then thirteen months old. Since then the boy has greatly improved by degrees becoming lighter, until now he is of a light chestnut brown color. Since Dr. Reynolds has had the case in charge the child has been vis-

She was very white and fragile, but more beautiful than in the coloring of perfect health. A new expression to was in the violet eyes raised to welcome him. "I am very glad to meet you again," she said, gently. "I hear you have been anxious about me. You were very kind." Then the words he had not meant to speak burst from his lips. "Anxious?" he said. "Can a man, Miss Rayburn, perishing of hunger, hear of a famine without a shudder? I am presumptuous, you will say. It is true. What is my life, with its many settled pages in which your eyes could never look, that I should dare offer it to you? And yet, purified by your love, I would try to make it more worthy. Tell me—answer me! If I serve as Jacob did for Rachel, is there hope that I may win you? My darling! my life, my darling! I cannot live my life without you! Will you not share it?" Lower and lower drooped the lids, until the long, dark lashes swept the marble cheek, while the sweet mouth trembled; but the momentary weakness passed, and she spoke: "Forget all that you have said, Mr. Clayton. I can never be."

"You do not love me?" he questioned sadly. Again the swift expression of pain flitted across the lovely face. "I shall never marry," she answered, "but in her voice crept, an almost pleading tone. I need my friends very much, Mr. Clayton. Do not desert me!" "I cannot," he replied. "To desert you would be to desert the hope of one day forcing you to unsay those cruel words—hope which will go with me to my grave."

What was the barrier between them? This was the question ever ringing in Harold Clayton's ear. As she looked when she pronounced his doom, so he had fancied she might have looked when the statue warmed into life. Since then she had been colder, more distant than before; but he had caught the momentary expression, and transferred it to the picture on which his every leisure moment was spent. He was thus engrossed one morning, ever striving to add new beauty to his almost perfect work, when a low knock at the door aroused him. "Come in!" he called, and then bent anew to his task, without so much as raising his head, until a low, laughing voice sounded beside him. "We were caught in the shower, Mr. Clayton, and I persuaded Margaret to seek shelter with me here. I did not dream that she would find herself forestalled."

It was Mrs. Somers who spoke—the lady who had first presented him to Miss Rayburn—whose instructions he had—unknown to her, carried out. "Margaret," she added, turning to her friend, "you have been sitting for your portrait, and did not let me know. Why have you kept it such a secret?" He had now sprung to his feet in time to see the rosy tide spread over Margaret Rayburn's face. "It was a liberty I took without Miss Rayburn's knowledge," Mrs. Somers explained. "I assure you I have never been so fortunate as to secure a sitting."

"Well, you shall have one now, and you must thank me for it," she rejoined, while Margaret turned away to examine the sketches and studies lying about in profuse confusion. "Here are some sketches taken while I was studying abroad, Miss Rayburn," said Harold. "Will you amuse yourself by looking at them?" "I will return in a few moments," interrupted Mrs. Somers. Wait for me, my dear. A word of expostulation rose to Margaret's lips, but she closed her mouth. The door had closed behind the speaker. Silence fell between the two thus left behind, when a loud cry arrested Harold's attention. He sprang to Miss Rayburn's side. Her eyes were fixed on a little sketch she held in her hand. It represented a gaming table, at one end of which sat a man, haggard, desperate, despairing, and by him a child, looking out a single gold piece, with a smile in her eyes, and seemingly a prayer on her lips. "You would like the history of that picture?" he said. "Let me tell you. Years ago I was in Hamburg. The gambling tables attracted me, and every night found me beside them, losing or winning according to the fortune of the hour. One evening the demon of luck pursued me. I lost and lost until I found that I was beggared. Mad, desperate, I resolved to put an end to my miserable life, when some one touched my shoulder; a child angel stood before me and slipped to my hand a gold piece. 'For my sake!' she whispered. The croupier's hoarse call warned me that no time was to be spared. I staked the gold and won, but turning to give her back her own she had fled."

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1880.
CITY AND COUNTY.

BRIEFLETS.

—Not any soda, thank you.
—April seems to have stolen a March on the weather.
—"The Octoroon" can be seen at the Opera house this evening.
—The storm interfered sadly with many of the doings last evening.
—John, Hutson, of St. Paul, paid his mother a flying visit to-day.
—Song and praise service at the First Methodist church this evening.
—The Guards have their muster and competitive drill at Cannon's hall Monday evening. Friends of the Guards are invited.

—Mrs. Bostwick's Guards has changed but little since yesterday, but that little seems to be for the better, though she is still very low indeed.
—The Baptist social last evening was not very largely attended owing to the stormy night, but those who did attend report a pleasant time indoors.

—Mrs. Cassie Robbins, wife of J. G. Robbins, the barber, died quite unexpectedly last evening, at her home. The remains were this afternoon taken to Darwin for interment.

—A part of the Court House fence is down and the water has washed a great gully along the hill, so that the mischievous fellows have an opportunity of pointing out the spot as the seat of the great cyclone.

—Prof. Farrar's art exhibition at Cannon's hall last evening was badly interfered with by the storm, there being but a small audience, where otherwise the hall would have been filled. By use of his stereopticon he presented some excellent views, which proved both interesting and entertaining.

—This is the last night of the Florence Herbert company, and none should miss seeing them in "The Octoroon." Monday evening they commence a week's engagement at Monroe, and from there go to Watertown and Oshkosh. They are a strong troupe, have good plays, and are bound to draw.

—Justice Brooks' court room still has the tobacco warehouse look, and the end is not yet. A large plug with a pocket knife stuck in it, occupies the center of the table, for the convenience of attorneys, jury-men and witnesses who delight in sampling it, and seems to be the only cheerful feature of the tedious case.

Elegant Accommodations, lowest prices. Astor, House, N. Y.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVERTSON, DRUGGISTS.
The thermometer at 6 o'clock last evening stood at 39 degrees above zero; at 1 o'clock a. m. to-day, at 39 degrees above; at 7 o'clock a. m. at 39 degrees above, and at 1 o'clock p. m. at 41 degrees above. Cloudy.

The indications to-day are, for the upper lake region, falling followed by rising barometer, northeast backing to westerly winds, and warmer partly cloudy weather.

AN IMMENSE STOCK.

McKey & Brother have received and put in place one of the largest stocks of new spring goods ever presented for inspection, in a city of this size. It is simply immense both in quality, quantity, and variety. Shelves, counters, and show cases are crowded with novelties and attractions, and the variety embraces some elegant and very rich goods as well as those of an every day demand. The stock is a complete one, and well worth inspecting. Special attention has been given to the silks and dress goods, to shawls and cloaks. The millinery department under the charge of Mrs. Amesen, is also an attractive feature of the establishment, and has been freshly stocked with many novelties and beauties. In the carpet department there is also a fine display on a large scale. In fact the whole establishment is in excellent shape for the rush of trade which always keeps up there.

OPENING THE SEASON.

On the first day of May Barr Robbins opens the season by giving his first grand exhibition in this city. Extensive preparations have been made for giving a better show in every respect than on any previous year, and those who attend will be surprised that so many attractions can be crowded into one enterprise, under the direction of one man, and that man, one who has suffered such terrible injuries as would have caused any other man to suspend the business entirely. The show itself in all its departments is such as will cause the tents to be crowded this season, and the opening exhibition here should be a fitting ovation and happy send-off to an enterprise which has Rock county for its home and Janesville for its headquarters, and yet embraces representatives from all parts of the world. The citizens will be glad to improve this opportunity, not only of being entertained, but also by their presence and their money, of expressing their satisfaction and pride in having such a mammoth show located here, and their appreciation of Mr. Robbins as a citizen, and of his value to this community. Rain or shine, calm or blow, there should not be a foot of room left vacant.

BETTER AND BETTER.

Last evening in spite of mud and storm the Florence Herbert company drew to the Opera house a larger audience than ever. The play presented, "Fanchon, the Cricketer," was given better than any previous one of their repertoire, and charmed everybody. Miss Herbert in the leading role did some excellent work, and the audience bestowed upon her a liberal amount of applause. The other members of the company did excellently, and the whole passed off in a very smooth and pleasing manner.

To-night the troupe appear for the last time, and will present the thrilling drama of "The Octoroon," showing a vivid and life-like picture of the South. It is filled with thrilling situations, and will doubtless prove the most entertaining of any of the plays given this week. The week has been a successful one, and the company have won for themselves a favoritism here which will cause them to be greeted by full houses whenever they may choose to return, and to-night will doubtless prove a fitting closing to a week so crowded with entertainment.

A BRILLIANT DISPLAY.

The opening of the millinery department of Creighton's Centennial store has attracted much attention last evening and to-day especially among the ladies. Despite the storm there were a goodly number of visitors last evening, and to-day there has been a constant stream going and coming. Had the weather been favorable there would have been such a jam as seldom occurs at any affair of the kind. The display is a brilliant one, and those who have not already seen it should by all means improve the opportunity presented this evening. We cannot begin to describe the charming bonnets, jaunty hats, gay tricornes, bright ornaments, flowers and laces which are there shown. It is a bewilderment of beauty. The display is arranged with much taste, the store being draped with lace, festooned with fringes and ribbons, and on every side is an array of bonnets and hats of every description, present and of sufficient variety, so that every one can find one or more which seem "oh so lovely." The ladies certainly have no need to go to any other city to see the latest and the prettiest, for it is there. Much credit is due to Miss O'Neil, who is in charge of the department, and to her assistants Miss Etheridge, Miss Griswold, Miss Morrissey and Miss Fisher, for the taste and enterprise shown, and for the attractive manner in which the new goods are arranged and presented to the public.
